That's not actually a very good idea; fiddling with settings like this makes it very easy for malware authors to get away with any kind of malicious behavior, and it's not nearly as hard to get malware onto your computer as you might believe. That said, here's my theory. I used Task Manager (from Windows 7) to see what was running, and took a close look at Notepad: If you click on a result, it will bring up a full listing 1cb139a0ed
