West Brom 3-1 Burnley?
Burnley's players dive through a challenge as West Bromwich Albion's players look on For all of us who have been supporters of sport, we have all had that moment when a player has done something so stupid that you simply cannot understand how they could be playing football on a normal level. You know that you are watching something that is not only about the play but also about the player and in some cases his life. Burnley may have got away with it against West Brom, but it had to be close. Many fans thought that the video refs, for all of their faults, would just this once put right a series of refereeing and decisions that were so up-ended by the officials you could not really understand what had happened. The one decision that has been the most discussed on social media and on TV is where the Burnley player dived down head first towards the ball rather than making contact with the ball with his head. Another Burnley player challenged the decision, but there was no call, and then Burnley players managed to get the ball out of danger. The other decision that has been discussed was the one that gave the ball to West Brom when Burnley were well offside. All of these decisions were made by the same referee, a referee who now has the nickname of “the Invisible Man” because he does so much in one game. Burnley players look on as the ball goes out of play. There is something really wrong with Burnley’s performance, because for the first time this season, Burnley played badly, but they managed to beat a team that is normally more than capable of beating them. There is no doubt that Burnley didn’t deserve to lose, and this question of what is going on in the Burnley dressing room that is getting so many footballing decisions wrong, and what could West Brom do to make
