Examination of the association of suicidal ideation in the DSM-5 with later suicide attempt. Suicidal ideation and suicide attempts are closely related phenomena. To examine the association between lifetime suicidal ideation and suicide attempts in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, fifth edition (DSM-5). To assess whether a single symptom is more associated with suicide attempts or whether the association is strongest with multidimensional constructs of suicidal ideation. The study included 1773 participants, who were recruited for an internet survey using the German version of the Patient Health Questionnaire 9-Item Scale (PHQ-9), and completed follow-up questionnaires at 6 and 12 months. (i) The course of suicide attempts during the 12-month follow-up period; and (ii) the association of suicidal ideation with later suicide attempts. Approximately 10% of the sample had a lifetime history of suicide attempts. Of those, 44% had attempted suicide during the follow-up period. A single item, "thoughts that you would be better off dead or of hurting yourself in some way," showed the strongest association with suicidal ideation and suicide attempts. However, this association was not stronger than that observed for the construct "suicidal ideation" and the construct "suicide attempts" as measured by the PH 82138339de
