What's New In?

Features: The Automap application connects to the Novation devices in your system and automatically sets their parameters. Simply open the Automap application, assign controls to knobs and sliders and immediately add them to a midi track. Automap syncs the selected parameters to the track and keeps them up-to-date after you edit the control's settings. You can easily select a range of parameters and add up to 10 controls at a time. You can choose to keep the controller's original parameters or apply your changes to them. When you edit a parameter, a flash light turns on to let you know the configuration is taken. Automap also offers a global mixer which enables you to assign controls to many tracks at once. Automap can also be used with digital audio workstations like Cubase, ProTools, Sonar and Reason. Other than that, it will also work with numerous other applications. Automap can automatically map controllers of the Neutron 16 series to the Neutron 16 controller. Please ensure that the Track_Automap setting in the current channel's controller is set to "ON" and that Automap is running. Automap can also map Neutron Controllers to Neutron Controller. Please ensure that the Automap setting in the Controller panel for the current channel is set to "ON".Q: backbone view when to trigger bind I have a question about when to trigger backbone view's bind. For example, var FooView = Backbone.View.extend({ events: { "click #create": "create" }, initialize: function () { this.model.bind("change", this.render); }, render: function () { return $("#foo").html(this.template(this.model.toJSON())); }, create: function () { this.model.save(); } }); My question is, as seen in the above example, that the render is never triggered when the create function is called, even when click #create is pressed. Is there a way to trigger bind when create is clicked so when the model
