This new "HyperMotion" tech builds on the same gameplay engine as FIFA 17 and FIFA 18 and utilizes its real-world players in order to help deliver realistic, authentic soccer gameplay. "We listened to fans' feedback and utilized the most advanced version of our EA SPORTS VR technology, Physique Match, to add a whole new dimension to gameplay for FIFA 22." said Andrew Ozzello, Creative Director, EA SPORTS FIFA. "We are taking player feedback, player knowledge, and what's happening around the football world, and we've created the most authentic and fun FIFA gameplay to date." Developed by Frontier Developments, the studio that brought to life the FIFA series from a small yet passionate team, FIFA 22 will feature the most comprehensive roster of over 450 real-life players from around the world, many of whom are now in their fifth year of the game. The one-of-a-kind roster features the likes of Argentina's Lionel Messi, France's Paul Pogba, England's Kane, Germany's Lewandowski, Portugal's Cristiano Ronaldo, Spain's Suarez, the USA's Lletget, Uruguay's Cavani, and more. There will also be more animations and faces than any FIFA game to date, including all 23 official UEFA Champions League anthem singers. FIFA 22 will be available on Windows PC, Xbox One, and PlayStation®4 in North America on September 27, 2021. A demo is also available to those who own either FIFA 17, FIFA 18 or FIFA 19 on Xbox One or Windows PC and will be available through the Xbox Games Store at no cost. FIFA 17: Canadian Anthem singer Gia Koka FIFA 18: Bulgarian Superstar Emil Dimitrov FIFA 19: Finnish singer Toni Saariinen There are rumors and then there are rumors, and when a rumour becomes reality (and the reality is Lucasfilm has a second trilogy planned) it's important to remember that not every rumor is true. The latest rumour that has gained steam is that the entire second trilogy has been rewritten. According to a new rumor, Lucasfilm took some time out to rewrite the story and characters but that the overall structure is the same.
