Review Love in the Limelight is a 1983 Australian comedy-drama film directed by Bruce Beresford, starring Sam Neill, Barry Otto, Margot Robbie and Barry Humphries. The film was based on the play Sunshine Jack by Jan Roberts. Humphries was originally intended to be in the original screenplay, but was replaced with Anthony Warde. My Review The Story A number of people in New York City are publishing a new magazine called The Limelight. The crew at the office includes Jack Sunshine (Sam Neill), an expat Australian who is tormented by his bosses Claude (Anthony Warde) and Florence Miller (Shirley Barrett) while managing the magazine. He also meets Lucy (Margot Robbie) while attempting to fix up a new friend with a date. Jack learns of a teenage crew of American sailors called the Sunnyboys who are on a ship out to sea drinking, drinking, drinking. So he turns to them to be their manager – only to find that he already has a manager. He is determined to beat his bosses at their own game. The film is a comedy with some melancholy elements as Jack has a difficult childhood. His father is a bully, his mother is frigid and his older brother, Chris, is an alcoholic whose only training for the Navy is a community service program to help mendaboys. Jack travels to the US to find his brother, but finds only trouble. He struggles to get a job, has to steal cash from some others and struggles to get into a posh co-ed school for scholarship purposes. In the film's most moving moments, Jack finds a home and work in New York City and succeeds at doing the best for himself. Director Beresford was inspired by Humphries' own experiences in New York City as an expat. The film was in cinemas for 10 weeks before being purchased by New Line Cinema. It was nominated for three Academy Awards, Best Original Screenplay, Best Actor and Best Original Song. It was the year's top grossing film. It spawned a highly successful sequel, More Laughs, which received the Academy Award for Best Picture in 1986. The Style and Quality If you've seen the TV series, you will recognise Sam Neill's Jack from it (Humphries played his father in the series). Neill gives a first-class performance as a man who has a great inner sense of humour and a

The aim of this study was to investigate the outcome of pulpotomy performed in primary and permanent teeth using the mineral trioxide aggregate (MTA) technique. During the period January 2000 to January 2002, 25 primary and 17 permanent teeth of 25 patients were treated with pulpotomy using MTA. The treatment and histological evaluations were made 2 years after the pulpotomy procedure. The mean clinical and radiographic success rate in primary and permanent teeth was 88% and 90%, respectively. Pulp vitality was maintained in both primary and permanent teeth, although there was slight sensitivity in 2 permanent teeth and slightly prominent calcification in 2 primary teeth. There were no postoperative complications.
