You can use any device or mobile gps antenna to connect it to your iPhone or iPod touch TrackLite will work for up to 10 years in any weather and climate for every trip or event you track Turns out, toilet paper isn't 100% needed after all. But if you're a severe wind storm or tropical storm away from an emergency shelter or the only services available, you're going to need to survive on less. That's where this multitool comes in. It'll stick to any rock, pick a path through dirt or sand, and quickly break down food into edible bits. First, an ice storm brings down power and communication lines, even as helicopters fly in supplies to get food and water to shelters. That means even if you're a very long way away from a shelter, you may have to make a trip to an outhouse to use the facilities. Good thing this multitool is, well, multi-tools! And there's an ingenious design that allows you to keep it and a knife on your belt at the same time. Also try our other ones. How to Make a Rusted Knob Grill the same as a steel grill!! Easy.
