CNBC Reports: Today a Senate subcommittee will hold hearings on a bill by Sen. Joe Lieberman (I-CT) called the IPN Pilot Program Enhancement Act of 2008. According to a CNBC report, the bill will include provisions that will require Internet service providers to disclose the information on offshore Internet gambling sites, a practice that is legal and protected under existing law. The IPN Pilot Program

Enhancement Act would add other requirements on the Department of Justice to monitor certain websites under special circumstances. TechWeek's John P. Murphy writes: It was a busy week in the patent wars. The Eastern District of Texas has been asked to reevaluate the validity of several patents held by Nortel. The patents were assigned to Nortel in 2002. In March 2007, Mimecast bought up over 50 Nortel patents and trademarks and announced a new settlement program that the company would be offering to acquire past infringers. In the last few years, Nortel (or its subsidiaries) has settled with 37 companies for $150,000 to $500,000. These settlements have been based on Nortel having valid patents that issued between May 2001 and May 2006. The current injunction order requires Nortel to pay a total of $27 million for violation of nine of its patents and requires the parties to enter into a licensing agreement on how to share those patents going forward. According to the IPBiz report, the Eastern District has until September 10th to approve or disapprove the agreement. If the order is approved, the settlement will start going into effect immediately. Just last month, the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC) issued a limited exclusion order against Samsung, manufacturer of the popular Galaxy line of cell phones and tablets. Samsung had been contacted by the ITC in May 2006 for potential violations of the Lodsys patent infringement claims. Lodsys was a company based in California and owned by the company Liquid Robotics. They filed suit against 17 different companies, including Samsung. Lodsys alleged that nine different patents were infringed by these companies. In an exclusive interview with ComputerWorld, one of the most prominent members of the IP industry's intellectual property (IP) mafia stopped short of offering a settlement deal to Apple. "I'm not prepared to describe the patent pool under which we operate," said Bob Martin, chief intellectual property counsel for the Computer and Communications Industry Association (CCIA), which represents a group of companies from the industry.

What's New In Microsoft Windows XP System Configuration Utility Update?

User Comment More like Windows XP Toolbar In any case, it's something to keep an eye on. Thanks, Marc The link to the download (3rd Party Tools) says the update will install on Windows XP-2000, but your tutorial says it's not compatible with Windows XP. Why? Share on other sites [color:blue]As-soon-as-it-started-from-the-M$-update-page, i'd suspect the problem being the upgrade tool? Do you have the Windows XP Service Pack 2 installed? [/color] No I didn't have SP2 installed, I upgraded from XP Home to XP Pro. The problem didn't occur until I did the SP2 upgrade. The only thing I'd had previously installed was the latest Service Pack for XP Pro SP2. Marc User Comment Thank you for uploading your file; however, please note that this item is flagged as a potentially unwanted application. The application has a high rate of crashing and should be removed to avoid possible system instability. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites Yes, I checked the checkbox to install the toolbar, but I don't want the Toolbar. I just want the Tools option to be added to msconfig, which I already have (by the way, I have all updates installed). MarcQ: How do I get my custom-styled variables from an object in a sass mixin? Is there a way to extract my custom-styled variables from my variables in a mixin? I am trying to create a simple pseudo-class to shorten my code. e.g. .my-class { border: 10px solid #e7e7e7; } //(pseudo-class) @mixin my-class($color){ .my-class { border: 10px solid #{ $color}; } } //use the mixin: .my-class-color-1 {
