Illinois, United States. The population was 28,898 at the 2010 census, up from 27,925 at the 2000 census. Gary is considered part of the Chicago metropolitan area. History The earliest white settlers to the area were German-speaking Quaker immigrants from Westphalia who were admitted to Illinois in 1803. Many of the settlers were affiliated with the Christian Reformed Church, a Protestant denomination which originated in Germany and spread to various countries throughout the world. Gary was founded in 1868 along the Chicago and North Western Railway, now part of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad line. It was an early railroad town built to service the needs of the railroad. The city name was inspired by one of the Christian Reformed churches, which was named after the German city of Geismar. The first general stores were opened, and the town began to take shape. However, this rail line stopped service to Gary in 1871. The railroad established a replacement service in 1874. Railroads, farmers, and the Chicago meatpacking industry produced wealth for the town. In 1889, the first newspaper, the Gary Gazette, was established. For the first three decades, the only industries in town were stores and lumberyards. The lumberyards produced railroad ties and railroad supplies and maintained warehouses along the rail line. In 1890, the manufacture of canning jars began in Gary. The canning jars became widely used for preserving food and were an important part of the community for decades. After the Wall Street crash of 1929, the Great Depression occurred. Gary d0c515b9f4 systemGov. Andrew Cuomo announced this afternoon that he has signed two bills to limit construction of greenhouses. In a press release, the governor said: This legislation will protect New Yorkers' health and safety by eliminating the creation of new small factory farms. Small farms are essential to maintaining a diverse food supply, ensuring family farming in New York and reducing our reliance on foreign countries for our food supply.

"These new rules will help ensure small farms can continue producing healthy food to feed the citizens of New York," said Sen. Liz Krueger. "I applaud Gov.

Cuomo for his leadership in this area, and for protecting family farms like those operated by the Leibner family in New York's Catskills." "Small farms are the backbone of New York's farm economy and need to be protected," said Richard Besser, president and CEO of American Farmland Trust. "We applaud Gov. Cuomo's actions to protect farm families from factory farms and other large operations that can pollute our air and water with potentially harmful chemicals and build their own landfills." The Leibners, who operate a dairy farm in New Windsor, N.Y., this week received a bill requiring that all new commercial greenhouses built in New York state must meet greenhouses deemed acceptable by the state Department of Environmental Conservation. The Leibners have been in this scenario before: They had their first greenhouse in the '90s, but the state has not been enforcing environmental protection standards. Then, in 2011, Cuomo signed a bill requiring that all new commercial greenhouses must have their own waste water treatment system and have to be able to withstand a hurricane.
