I am assigning a fake camera to the 3D object using Camera.assign() method. Why does it create a object? Then how to delete it? import bpy img = bpy.data.images["Eye-Tin-Can"] rot = (0.7071068, 0.0, 0.0, 0.7071068)

bpy.ops.object.camera_add(location=(0, 0, 0))
bpy.ops.object.camera_assign(img = img, location = (0, 0, 0), rotation_euler = rot) print("==== Object created =====")

bpy.ops.object.camera_delete() print("==== Camera deleted =====")

A: I assume there is something wrong in your code. The above code works fine for me.

bpy.ops.object.camera_assign(img = img, location = (0, 0, 0), rotation_euler = rot) print("==== Object created =====") # Do some stuff...

bpy.ops.object.camera_delete() print("==== Camera deleted =====")

See the full code, tested on Blender 2.76 and 2.77, as a Dropbox link: Concerning your question on deleting the camera, I recommend to use `camera_delete()`, as this will not destroy the object.

`bpy.ops.object.camera_delete()`

The Best Sports App For Android phones! The Best Sports App For Android phones! What is the best sport app for android phone? It all depends on what's important to you. Are you looking for something that provides the most complete coverage of your favorite sports, or something that is light on features to keep you from getting bored with the app? If the latter is more important to you, no question should be asked – you should simply stick with the free, ad-supported version of Bleacher Report. If you want to experience a gorgeous app that is richer in features than the freemium version, consider your options. First and foremost, you have to consider what you are looking for in an Android sports app. Are you looking for a way to watch your favorite team play against some of the top competition in the world – with depth and crisp images of the field and uniforms? If so, you are probably looking for Football Club. This is not the case, but then, there aren't any Android versions of Football Club, and you're just better off sticking with the free, ad-supported version of Bleacher Report. If, however, you are more interested in just watching some of the top high school football teams go head to head in a live broadcast, the best sports app for Android phones is not Football Club, but the now defunct Orange Crush. The live broadcast options and graphics are high quality, and the use of some of the top college and high school talent available has made it a perennial favorite of sports fans. If you are looking for football coverage, however, you should be looking elsewhere. The free version of Bleacher Report offers the barest of high school level coverage, and the only college coverage available for fans of FCS (Football Championship Subdivision) teams is covered by ESPN. You will have to pay a monthly fee for the ability to watch top FBS (Football Bowl Subdivision) games, though. If you are interested in the rarest of sports, the one that takes place in far-flung locations and is broadcast on the International Space Station, or just really want to see how far some of your favorite sports star's skills have developed, then football won't
