Hi I'm trying to create a view that is named "edit-link", it is a link that when clicked takes to another page, and that page has a component called edit-link as well, and I'm trying to reference this component like so: `{{edit-link/component}}` The error that I get is: Uncaught TypeError: Cannot read property 'component' of undefined Edit: this is my controller: `import Ember from 'ember'; export default Ember.Controller.extend({ init: function() { } });` A: Try: `{{#view 'edit-link'}}` If you are using a block helper as the root view, you should be able to do: `{{view 'edit-link' contentBinding="content.name"}}` See the View Compiler guide for more info. Q: Spring cloud apis in a Spring cloud app - application.properties I have started a spring cloud app using following commands. `kubectl create -f spring-config/app.yaml` `kubectl create -f spring-config/bus-config.yaml` `kubectl create -f spring-config/service-config.yaml` As of now i have the following endpoint apis. `/cluster/health` `/cluster/app/health` `/cluster/bus/health` `/cluster/service/health` and I want to add another url for `/cluster/api`. So is it possible to add another endpoint to the above properties and make it to read from application.properties? A: Have a look at spring-cloud-kubernetes-config. You can register your API as a Service using a Kubernetes label. Q: How can I create a table with no page breaks but with no kable output formatting? I've been working with the answers to this post for the past few days (Excel - preventing page breaks in table) and I'm trying to do the same thing in R. I've figured out how to create a table without page breaks but with all
