fan of the RPG genre before becoming a fan of yours, and I was immediately captivated by the art and the music. It was an immediate feel-good experience, and I loved it. I was amazed by the amount of content and the impressive depth of the story. I am glad that I was able to ence the story of the Lands Between. Although I am an avid fan of RPG games, I am not a fan of action games. However, as I played through the game, I was engrossed. It was hard to put the game down, and I had to keep repeating a couple of times "I have to stop playing". gh I did not enjoy the action part of the game as much, it was not exactly useless. Instead, I was captivated by the action that unfolded in the game. In the action part, there was a high level of freedom for development. I was able to play each battle situation in an advantageous r, and I felt my level of skill increase. When I was able to find the most effective use of various attacks, I was able to defeat even hard-to-beat enemies. I played in an interesting way, and I gained the natural feeling of skill that I was unable to have while playing the action part. It that there are many games with a similar gameplay as the one in the game. I am not entirely sure why that is. However, there are many differences between the game and other games that cause me to feel a different level of satisfaction. It may be because the action parts in games are not so much enjoyable like the action part of the game. However, in the game, there were a few action segments with a high level of freedom. I also liked the action parts during large boss fights. I felt that this part was suitable for entertainment and satisfaction. The parts had a high level of freedom, and I was able to feel my level of skill growing. In the action part, I was not able to feel a lot of feedback or a sense of reward while playing. However, I could feel my level of skill growing. If you are an action game fan, I recommend this game. he action part of the game was not exciting, I was able to feel a sense of satisfaction when I played the action part. Cerebral Oxygenation to Predict Postoperative Neurologic Dysfunction in Intracerebral Hemorrhage Patients: A Prospective Single-Center Study. Background and Purpose- The prognostic value of a single bedside measurement of cerebral oxygenation in intracerebral hemorrhage (ICH) patients has not been assessed as yet. The main objective of this study was to assess whether cerebral oxygenation evaluated with near-infrared spectroscopy (NIRS) predicts postoperative (PO) neurologic dysfunction in ICH patients. Methods-Preoperative and intraoperative data were collected from ICH patients who underwent surgical evacuation within 12 hours from stroke onset. Postoperative neurologic dysfunction was defined as the occurrence of any PO postoperative deficit (modified Rankin Scale [mRS] >1) within 30 days from surgery. Cerebral oxygenation was assessed with NIRS at the beginning of surgery. The neuromonitoring package included measures of blood pressure (BP), cerebral perfusion pressure (CPP), and blood oxygenation. Occlusion tests were performed to assess the responsiveness of the microcirculation (RO2d and TO2d). Postoperative evolution of BP, CPP, and oxygenation was also evaluated. The predictive power of the NIRS variables was assessed with receiver operating characteristics (ROC) analysis. Results- NIRS parameters were significantly lower in patients with PO neurologic dysfunction. ROC analysis showed that the area under the curve for TO2d decreased when the chosen level of specificity rose. The optimal TO2d cutoff value, defined as the level corresponding to the highest sum of sensitivity and specificity, was 31.0%. The sensitivity was 74.6% (95% CI, 60.5%-85.4%) and the specificity was 55.4% (95% CI, 44.6%-65.5%). In univariate analysis, the risks of PO neurologic dysfunction were significantly associated with lower TO2d and RO2d. Intraoperative BP instability was also associated with PO neurologic dysfunction (odds ratio, 1.53; 95% CI, 1.17-1.72). In multivariate analysis, only TO2d was associated with PO neurologic dysfunction (odds ratio, 1.85; 95% CI, 1.16-2.69). Conclusions- Low cerebral oxygenation evaluated with NIRS is significantly associated with PO neurologic dysfunction after surgical evacuation of ICH. This observation could have important consequences
