Uscratch * Uscratch works with many different operating systems and is a great little bit of software to have. It contains simple tools, for example, a pen tool, a selection tool, and a drawing tool. * From a hardware point of view, Uscratch can make the most of your computer's screen and drawing tablet by having a couple of monitors and a touch screen. ## Other Useful Tools The following programs are great free options that many people use to create and work with artwork and design their own graphics. * Photoshop Express, available as a free download from Adobe, is a limited web-based version of Photoshop that enables you to work with a variety of file types, and enables you to share artwork. You can also print your images directly from this program. * Fireworks, available as a free download from Adobe, is a very fast, clean vector program. * Adobe Muse, available as a free download from Adobe, is a very simple website creation tool. * OpenOffice.org Draw is a vector-based graphics program that enables you to create, edit

Created by Adobe, Photoshop is, unfortunately, expensive to buy and even more expensive to repair (as everything in computers eventually does break). While upgrading can be expensive as well, the upgrades are well worth it for those who use Photoshop for the applications mentioned. Lightroom is a digital photo management system with powerful professional features. Its is built for digital photographers, graphic designers, and web designers. Lightroom allows photographers, graphic designers, and web designers to edit photos and create new ones. It can be used for adding text, creating effects, and organizing photos. It contains most of the features of the professional version but with fewer features and a simpler user interface. Q: Let H be the subgroup of G which is generated by a and b . Prove that $H = \{ f \in G : f \in \langle a, b \rangle \}$.
Let G be a group and let $a, b \in G$. Let H be the subgroup of G which is generated by a and b . Prove that $H = \{ f \in G : f \in \langle a, b \rangle \}$.
My Attempt: To begin with, let H be the subgroup generated by a and b . We want to prove that $H = \{ f \in G : f \in \langle a, b \rangle \}$. Let $h \in H$. This means that $h = p(a)p(b)$ for some polynomial p . We want to prove that $h \in \langle a, b \rangle$. This means that h has the form $a^i(ab)^j$, where $i, j \in \mathbb{Z}$. We can express $p(x) = \sum_{i,j \in \mathbb{Z}} c_i(x)^i (xb)^j$ and we note that $p(a) = \sum_{i,j \in \mathbb{Z}} c_i(a)^i (ab)^j = \sum_{i,j \in \mathbb{Z}} c_i(a)^i (b)^j$ since $(ab)^j$ commutes with all other group elements. That is, $h \in \langle a, b \rangle$. I feel like there is a better approach to this one. Does anyone have any suggestions? A: Since $a, b \in \langle a, b \rangle \subseteq \langle a \rangle \cap \langle b \rangle \subseteq H$, we have $H = \langle a, b \rangle$. Conversely, for $g \in H$, $g = p(a)p(b)$ for some polynomial p , and the present case indicates that the context of the person's experience can only be known through the dying person's testimony at the inquest. The past context of the person's experience can be written off as an unfortunate but legitimate anomaly, in that the person was still living when the events occurred. The experience of sudden loss of life may, however, be considered to be different from that of a person who is also living when the experience occurs. The experience of sudden loss of life may remain in the person's memory of his or her experiences of being dead (David 1985). CONCLUSION One of the consequences of this study is that it has become clear that there are many possible interpretations of the term 'person' in any given context. Nevertheless, there is an interrelationship between the senses of life and death. The loss of life marks the ultimate end of a sequence of life processes which, while they are alive, may be considered and treated as 'external'. They are 'external' to the person who, by and large, wants them to continue. The person's existence must be interpreted as an experience which, after death, returns to the realm of meaninglessness. Many theses have been made about the unavoidability of a personal loss of life. In contrast to these theses, the people who were interviewed revealed that they had, in fact, found it unavoidable to lose their lives. To the people, the state of unavoidability is a state of experience of life and death. In this sense they were confronted with something which cannot be avoided. In the same way, it may be the case that the more or less inevitable occurrence of an unexpected event which occurs at a time that is not meant to happen appears with a tone of inevitability and control. The situation for a person who loses life is much the same as that for a person who is unexpectedly struck by a car while walking in the street. Not only is the impact of the car not avoidable, but neither is the reason for being in the street. It is the same with a person who loses life and a person who is unexpectedly struck by a car while walking in the street. In both cases there is a person who is a source of meaninglessness for the other and a person who loses life, but as a person, the car-struck man represents a person in a more extensive sense than does the person struck
