Vascular endothelial growth factor (VEGF) plays a crucial role in the development of angiogenesis. Positively charged fatty acids inhibit VEGF expression by modulating the distribution of cell surface polyanionic heparan sulphate proteoglycan (HSPG) synthesis. The present study examined the effect of different fatty acids on the expression of VEGF, HSPG synthesis and distribution of VEGF in adipose tissue of rat. Male Wistar rats were fed with a control diet, olive oil, coconut oil or fish oil for 10 days. In addition, VEGF, HSPG synthesis and distribution in adipose tissue were also examined in these groups. The results indicated that VEGF, HSPG synthesis and distribution were significantly increased in coconut oil, olive oil and fish oil groups compared with control group. However, each fatty acid had different effects on the expression of VEGF, HSPG synthesis and distribution. In addition, the increase in fatty acid intake could promote angiogenesis and increase adipose tissue mass. These findings indicate that fatty acids may play an important role in obesity 0cc13bf012

But we know that wasn't the case. This is not an issue between the Vic and the Vic, this is an issue between the Vic's firmware and somebody else's. Either something in the firmware that doesn't quite like the Vic or a hardware issue. The Vic is always going to be better than the Link, for some class of speakers and for some class of music. The Link, again, the truth about the Link, it's just pretty good. Which is a very good thing. Victoria? Victoria? So let's just assume we're trying to use the Vic to do what the Link was designed to do, which was a very small, low floor and very light weight turntable. There's a couple of things that I want to point out here. First of all I have the default setting. I have the needle up there. I have the arm centered at the starting position. I have the tone arm at the lowest point in the stroke and the tone arm above that, with the arm returning to this arm rest. I have my speed on 78, which is the lowest the Vic will go, and I have it on 8, which is the lowest setting on the Link. Let's go ahead and play this recorded track. [Victoria] You have the link on your can. It's a 56K link
