I have the following problem : I want to calculate the price of a loan which will pay my monthly repayments for 6 months. The loan company provides all the details of the payment plan, except the interest rate, which I know. The loan is for \$20,000 with a monthly payment of \$1,125. I want to find the monthly interest rate (r) that will pay the mortgage for six months. What is the best method to solve this problem? A: Suppose your payment is C and the monthly interest rate is r . Then $\sum_{t=1}^6 (C-r) = 20,000$, and the cost of the loan is $\sum_{t=1}^6 (-r) = -20,000r$. So the cost is $20,000 + (-20,000r) = 20,000 - 20,000r = 0$. You've made a \$20,000 monthly payment at a monthly interest rate of $-20,000r$. If we assume that monthly payments must be positive, then this is only possible if $r > 0$. Dry Link Dry Link is a dry dock located in the New Waterfront area of Fremantle, Western Australia. The project was designed by Mowbray Grimwade and developed by Blair Brothers. It was the first purpose-built dry dock built in Fremantle since the Sulphur Dock in the city's early maritime history. The development, which was first revealed in a city council report in 2003, was completed in 2009. It covers an area of three hectares and was completed at a cost of \$80 million, supported by \$10 million from the State Government. Blair Brothers were awarded the project in 2005. It was the first time the firm had been successful in a tender process for a project of this magnitude. References 0cc13bf012
