The studies in this report indicate that c-FLIP, an anti-apoptotic member of the death domain protein family, is frequently expressed in human astrocytomas and plays an essential role in cell survival. Moreover, it is associated with the overexpression of vasopressin type 2 receptor mRNA. The positive correlation of these findings suggests that the Fc-gamma receptor-mediated vesicle mobilization pathway may play an important role in the cell death cascade of apoptosis in human astrocytomas. In addition, our previous work has shown that c-FLIP is capable of inhibiting the catalytic activity of caspases via interacting with caspase-8. It is likely that c-FLIP antagonizes the activity of caspase-8 via direct competition with Bax, resulting in inhibition of the apoptosis. Our observations therefore indicate that tumour necrosis factor-related apoptosis-inducing ligand and vesicle mobilization are two routes that are utilized by tumour cells to inhibit the apoptosis.Cruise Ship Rival from Japan Confirmed It looks like Disney and Star Cruises will be going head to head for cruise fans in Japan.
