Tenda Firmware Update BEST

searched and found nothing about this vulnerability in the forums. i know that the firmware works fine, i just installed it, and it worked. my router's ip is 192.168.1.10, the gateway is 192.2, and the ns is 192.2. the issue is that tenda uses a tcpmon tool that works in the background. it is called tcpmon with a periodic task that starts it. this periodically checks that tcp connections are still open. if the check fails, the same action occurs as if the connection had been closed. as we can see, the exploit is not packed with any forms of encryption and it's simply located at offset 0x5e. with a little help from python and cidr, we can write a function that will find the location of the exploit in a firmware binary: `#!/usr/bin/env python # -- coding: utf-8 -- import binascii import subprocess def get_offset(binfile): # read the binfile to a byte array data = subprocess.check_output([ binfile, '--bin', '-c', '-o', '+0x5e' ]) return int(binascii.hexlify(data), 16) if __name__ == '__main__': print get_offset( 'us_ac18v1.0br_v15.03.05.05_multi_td01.bin' )` tenda firmware update we can now use this function to easily identify the location of the exploit. in this case, we use python to walk through the firmware, extract all the offsets, and find the beginning of the function that is loaded into memory via the first instruction of the exploit. rar archives are a type of archive file used for compression of files. they can only contain text files or executable files. because we are dealing with a compressed file and its extension is .bin, we know that this file is an executable. the current firmware version we have is 15.03.05.05, so we know this is the latest version of the firmware. and since .bin is the extension for executable files, we can infer that this file is an executable. we can go ahead and open it with the 7-zip archive manager. we will be extracting the firmware to our lab machine's hard drive and refer to it in this guide as us_ac18v1.0br_v15.05_multi_td01.bin

Tenda Firmware Update

i have noticed some of the commands and how to set up some of the files are different on the tenda website and the images that came with my router. i am not sure if the last image is the correct one. i have included both sets below. i have attached both of the images below. tenda mobility router firmware settings tenda mobility router firmware settings even though i have requested to upgrade my router firmware, it is not showing me the option. i have followed the instructions for the upgrade but it is still not working. current firmware version:v12.01.48_multi current firmware version:v02.03.106_multi current firmware version:v12.52_multi current firmware version:v12.46_multi current firmware version:v12.42_multi our goal is to wait for the admin login page to load. we will then use the dns lookup feature to update the record to point to another ip address. we'll wait for it to load. once we have that ip in hand, we'll use curl to try and access the tenda admin page. this will tell us if the device is in a state where we can actually login to the admin page. we'll also check for the "powered on" status of the device to make sure that it is turned on. finally, we'll use Wireshark to capture the traffic. we will then run tcpdump and Wireshark for the conversation. as you can see, there are two records we want to update. we will update the ping to a c&c address and the dns to a different address. if the device is in a "powered on" state, the address we use should not have a route to it. we are going to update the dns to point to: >. 5ec8ef588b
