Nemo Weather is an application for Windows users that provides weather information for all of the major cities in the world. It combines live data from the most accurate weather sources with official forecast information to give you up-to-date weather forecasts, weather alerts, and weather warnings in areas you are monitoring. It provides a great advantage over the competition because it uses a large, worldwide network of weather stations to provide you with accurate, immediate information and real-time alerts for your area. Nemo Weather offers on-demand forecasts, maps and local weather icons for more than 20,000 cities in 200 countries. It also features a comprehensive web interface for more extensive weather control. Nemo Security is a software program designed to help keep your network safe from intruders. It is a security tool that can detect Wi-Fi networks it has never seen before, and it can find Wi-Fi networks that are trying to avoid detection. There's really no better way to live in WA than to travel in the city center of Perth. Here we have got a city that is exciting and fun and full of tradition. Everything is very well thought out and the people are very helpful and nice. Obviously, there is a lot more to Western Australia than the beautiful beaches and crystal clear water, there is much more going on in the heart of the land. Our hearts all beat for freedom and spirit of independence and we will fight to remain free as long as we are able to continue to appreciate the beauties of being a small country that is so very blessed. October 11, 2005: Perth, Australia I left for home last night and I have the perfect view of the beautiful evening city lights of Perth from the back of the ship. It was a beautiful flight and lovely to be back on familiar Australian soil. There was a food fight when the cabin crew announced that we were getting off the plane, lots of shouting and screaming in the aisle as everybody argued over who got their assigned seat and how excited they were to get to get back to Perth. I have been super excited to see the friends I made last time I was in Perth this time. Everyone is having a marvelous time in the city and Sydney is a much bigger and more exciting city that I am ready for. I miss the friends I made and the city but there's just something about Sydney that has given me a mad case of homesickness. We are heading to the gorgeous Illawong on the western suburbs of Sydney! I still don't know what I was doing in Perth, this is such an incredibly beautiful part of the world and I really can't believe that I lived in Sydney for a year and didn't take advantage of a trip back! Its only 3 days away now, and I better get packing! October 12, 2005: Sydney, Australia I was at work in the SMH today and ran into the cleaner of my flat. It was so funny to catch up with her and hear about the things that are going on with her life. There's a lot more going on in Sydney than I knew about. Its also much bigger than I thought and that is why it can be so enjoyable. I remember when we used to be stuck in the city center in Perth and struggled to find parking, now I can be in the car in seconds and drive up to the dining room of Illawong and ask for a table and even if its too early I can still get a table. Go figure! Ill spend a wonderful 6 days in Sydney with all of the friends I made last year. Its going to be an amazingly fun time. October 21, 2005: Sydney, Australia There's something about living in a foreign country that is a part of you that never leaves. After a year of traveling and meeting people and experiencing other cultures, this city just kind of seeps into you and sticks. There's no way for it to not affect you. I moved to Sydney and its very hard to move and go back to the place I lived in Perth. I knew that it was going to be hard when I moved here and it has been, but Sydney has been far more amazing and exciting than I ever thought it would be. New places to visit and see, a new house, a new job, and the opportunity to start a whole new chapter in my life.
