1. The new file explorer from Apple and the performance boost turned this into an essential tool to me. The new button styles really helps to improve productivity for me. I actually use this in portrait mode which I didn't even realize it was possible to do. It is very comfortable to use and has a different feel than the standard file explorer where it feels a little cheap to pinch and zoom. 2. Bitmap and Text emulation. A lot of times people make mistakes when working on a JPEG and then want to edit it in Photoshop. I find this a great time saver. I often make mistakes when adding text in Photoshop and want to use it in Powerpoint for instance. This lets me do that so quickly. It also works on a lot of file formats besides JPEG and lets you easily create JPEGs from these. It does have a few quirks at the moment like old versions of Acrobat don't like to work with it. 3. Tile Multiple Images Together. I would use this if I had a job that I knew it was going to take me a while like rendering larger graphics and needed a higher level of color realism. Most of the time I just section images but in a big animation it is very useful because the tiling can give you the illusion that you are zooming in and making your screen size much bigger. BUG FIX: Fix for the issue where photos were sometimes duplicated due to a disk error . This issue has existed since LR 5 was released more than two years ago (but was noted as being a bug back then). Adobe fixed the bug this version. BONUS FEATURE: New "Slide Show" sorting feature, available in the LR 5 Expert Panel .
