Downloaded from sirius-books.com on .Q: Check for id in array of ids and use those values in query Is there a way to create a generic function that can take an array of ids and use it in the where clause and make sure the queried id is in that array? Take the following query: SELECT * FROM `pages` AS `p` WHERE `p`.`id` = '$id' OR `p`.`id` IN (1, 2, 5) The problem with this is that, if it is a serialized array of ids, it will loop over all of them regardless of whether that id is the one being queried or if that id is in the list of ids. I was hoping to find a function that I could pass an array of ids into and it would take it and use the WHERE clause like the following: SELECT * FROM `pages` AS `p` WHERE `p`.`id` = '$id' OR `p`.`id` IN (SELECT COUNT() FROM `pages` AS `p` WHERE `p`.`id` = '$id') I thought maybe something like the following function would work, but the IN clause doesn't seem to work. function in_array_func($array, $value) { if(sizeof($array) == 0) return false; $result = mysql_query("SELECT COUNT() FROM pages WHERE id='$value'") or die(mysql_error()); if($result) { return mysql_result($result,0) > 0? true : false; } else { return false;
